Protester told to 'get a job'

After Ontario Coalition Against Poverty protesters storm city hall meeting, Coun. Doug Ford comment caught on tape Echoes earlier Rob Ford remark

After Ontario Coalition Against Poverty protesters stormed a meeting of city council's budget committee Thursday morning, committee vice-chair Doug Ford told a confrontational protester to "get a job."

Radio station 680 News captured Ford's comment on tape.

Asked about it during the budget committee's lunch break, Ford said, "I didn't say 'Get a job,' not at all. Show me on tape when I said that." Told that reporters had listened to the tape, he did not respond; a security guard then escorted him out of the committee room.

Two protesters were arrested soon after the exchange, one for assaulting a police officer and another for obstructing the arrest, police spokesperson Const. Wendy Drummond said later.

After the two arrests, some of the 40-plus protesters present called police officers "pigs," "rapists" and "Nazis." More than 15 officers lined the wall beside the entrance to councillors' office area.

Standing on a hallway table, OCAP leader John Clarke denounced council's proposed cuts to bus routes and Mayor Rob Ford's privatization plans, saying Ford was advocating a "rerun of the Mike Harris agenda."

"This year they're only delivering the first blow," Clarke said. "Much worse is to come. The vision that Ford has of this city is a police force and a few privatized services operated by non-unionized cheap labour."

A group of protesters gathered in the committee room, and OCAP's Lisa Schofield strode forward to the councillors' seats to begin stating its grievances, which included federal cuts to immigration settlement services — council this week decided not to write a letter to the federal government protesting those cuts — and a shortage of beds in homeless shelters. Mayor Rob Ford made similar remarks to OCAP protesters during city hall demonstrations in 2002 and 2005.

- In 2002, he told an OCAP protester, "Do you have a job, sir? I'll give you a newspaper to find a job, like everyone else has to do between nine and five."

Mayor treated for kidney stone

Toronto Mayor Rob Ford is at home resting after being admitted to hospital Thursday for a kidney stone.

He will be seeing a urologist Friday regarding the kidney stone, said his spokeswoman Adrienne Batra.

She added he is in good spirits as some of the pain has subsided.

"He is still returning phone calls, he's still talking to constituents and he's still open for business," Batra said. "For anyone that's had kidney stones, it can be kind of painful but I can assure you that this is nothing serious and it's being treated."

Calgary Mayor Naheed Nenshi told the Toronto Star's editorial board Thursday morning that he had been informed he probably wouldn't be meeting with Ford Friday as scheduled.

Deputy Mayor Doug Holyday said he had been told Ford, who has suffered from kidney stones before, would be "out of commission for at least a couple of days."

$774M shortfall projected for 2012

$9.4B 2011 budget goes to executive committee for sign-off next week, then to council Feb. 23 for final approval

Toronto is balancing this year's budget without a property tax increase or transit fare hike, but next year is not nearly as rosy, councillors were warned Thursday.

Finance officials revealed the budget committee will be looking at a $774-million opening shortfall when it begins working on 2012 finances right after the 2011 budget is passed later this month.

The gap is due to the need to replace $360 million in one-time funds used to balance this year's budget, plus $414 million in increases to the cost of wages and benefits, supplies, and other items next year.

Officials are recommending a two per cent property tax increase and 10-cent transit fare hike for 2012.

Even with those moves, and an expected $25-million increase in land transfer taxes, the shortfall falls only to $530 million.

"Will there be a multi-year phase-out? Will it all happen at once? I don't think it can happen all at once in 2012."

COUN. PETER MILCZYN ON SCRAPPNG THE LAND TRANSFER TAX

Options for eliminating that gap include unspecified cuts. Also, it's hoped the provincial government will change its mind and help cover the TTC's operating subsidy.

While Mayor Rob Ford campaigned on eliminating the land transfer tax in 2012, finance staff recommend keeping it.

"We haven't addressed the elimination of the land transfer tax," said chief financial officer Cam Weldon, adding he would advise against it. "My recommendation to council would be to eliminate the deficit first."

Bee deaths confound keepers

Royal Ontario Museum officials are grappling with the mystery of what killed 20,000 honeybees at the museum's popular hands-on biodiversity gallery.

Viewed by the public through a specially designed glass hive on the second floor, the bees seemed perfectly healthy up until late last week, said gallery co-ordinator Claire Watts.

Then, in just two days, they all died.

"We don't really know what caused it," said Watts, noting this particular colony has been living at the ROM for two years without a problem.

While the bees live for the most part on honey they collected during the warmer months, staff had been supplying the insects with sugar water during the winter, she said.

University of Guelph researcher Janine McGowan, who has been acting as the ROM's beekeeper for the past several years, said that colony collapse disorder, a problem affecting bees oft-cited as a cause for any number of bee ailments in the media, is not to blame.

▶ Students at Earl Haig Secondary School rehearse flash mobs that they plan to perform Friday at Finch station.

All the TTC's a stage, activists merely players

Students from more than 14 Toronto schools will be making impromptu stages out of various TTC subway stations Friday to raise tokens for homeless youth.

"Our goal is to raise 5,000 tokens, but it's also to raise awareness about youth homelessness," said Judy Leroux of Youth Without Shelter.

Flash mobs, singers, dancers, beat-boxers and flash poets — professional and amateur alike — will be using short performances Friday to benefit Tokens4Change.

"In the arts, we're always trying to connect with people, we're always trying to effect some change," said Scott Lazarus, an artist who works with Project: Humanity, "and this was a special opportunity to affect a lot of people on a specific issue."

Those wishing to donate at any time in the next month can do so by texting the word "tokens" to 45678. A $5 donation will be charged to your phone bill.

As we hurry from spot to spot trying to spend as little time as possible in the blistering cold, there are those that make their living doing the exact opposite.

Couriers, maintenance workers, postal workers and food vendors all brave the elements to make a buck and fend for their families.

Contrary to what most may think, the hardest days don't occur in the winter.

"The worst days to work are mid-July and early August," said courier Frank McCourt.

All the movement helps these brave souls stay warm — and being clad in many layers helps, too.

"Once you put on the clothes, the proper layers and what not, there's nothing to it," said Owen Williams, a Rogers repairman.

"In the summer there are a lot more obstacles — the visuals — if you know what I'm saying."
OWEN WILLIAMS

For others, customer traffic is the key to keeping warm when the temperatures dip to –25 C with the wind chill, as was the case Thursday morning, according to weathernetwork.ca.

"It stays warm when it's busy," said hotdog vendor Henry Nguyen. "If I'm not busy, it's colder."

Too much exposure to the frigid temperatures can be dangerous, but it won't make you sick.

"Viruses cause a cold," said Melissa, a Telehealth Ontario nurse. "Being outside isn't going to cause a cold."

Arrest made after alleged assault in High Park

With the public's help, Toronto police arrested a man who allegedly assaulted a TTC employee and a woman holding a baby near the High Park subway station.

The incident occurred Feb. 3 around 1 p.m. at Quebec Avenue near Bloor Street West.

Police say a man was causing a disturbance on the subway and threw a drink at a TTC employee. The man then exited at the High Park subway station, where he allegedly yelled at and used his bag to hit a 41-year-old woman, who was carrying a baby, in the face.

Police say a 21-year-old man who witnessed the alleged assault then tackled and pinned the attacker to the ground before being punched in the face. Police arrived shortly after.

Khoder Ahmed, 32, is charged with two counts of assault, as well as mischief and causing a disturbance.

▶ Urban raccoons don't have to waste time looking for food, which gives them more time to learn and explore. But their abundant food supply is making them chubby and contributing to heart disease and diabetes.

TORONTO' S DUBIOUS CLAIM TO FAME

'RACCOON CAPITAL OF THE WORLD'

We all know they're out there, prying open garbage cans, scurrying across fences and maybe even bunking under your deck. But urban raccoons — who look just like their country cousins but live very different lives — are rarely studied, leaving humans in the dark about what the nocturnal animals get up to while we're sleeping.

A new CBC documentary will change that. Raccoon Nation, airing Feb. 24 at 8 p.m. on The Nature Of Things, was filmed largely in Toronto, the apparent "raccoon capital of the world" (a tagline unlikely to be used to promote the local tourism industry).

The film offers a glimpse into the secret lives of city raccoons, street-smart garbage-eaters who have more in common with people than you would think.

And it seems everything we're doing to thwart those street-smart, garbage-loving raccoons is making them smarter.

"All the changes that we put in their way — be it bungee cords on our green bins and latches and all of these things — they figure out, because they're so dexterous, and they have long memories," says Susan Fleming, who wrote, directed and produced Raccoon Nation. "So now they're amassing more knowledge."

The documentary follows two researchers from York University who embark on a study that produces fascinating portraits of the lives of five raccoons that live in Toronto.

They found that the raccoons live in small territories and avoid crossing major streets — which, given the risk of becoming road kill, is a key survival strategy.

▶ Tammy Marquardt leaves the court at Osgoode Hall yesterday and talks to media about her ordeal. Medical evidence now shows Tammy's son wasn't murdered, but likely died of a seizure — another of the dozens of blunders made by disgraced pathologist Charles Smith.

Tammy Marquardt tenderly hugged her five-month-old daughter Thursday, minutes after Ontario's top court granted her a new trial in the death of her toddler 17 years ago.

Then, stepping into the sunshine, Marquardt said it was "torture" being labelled a child killer on the strength of expert evidence from now-disgraced pathologist Charles Smith.

"Try having your heart ripped out and someone squeezing it right in front of your face," Marquardt said.

"Finally, the nightmare is coming to an end and I'm waking up."

It took the Ontario Court of Appeal just five minutes to conclude the 38-year-old mother had been the victim of a miscarriage of justice and quash her second-degree murder conviction.

In doing so, Justice Marc Rosenberg said the court recognized that Marquardt had been through a "terrible" ordeal.

She said she was looking forward to getting on with a life that includes her baby Tiffany and possibly the two sons authorities seized after she was charged in 1993.

The mother from Oshawa spent 14 years behind bars after she was convicted in 1995 of killing her son, two-year-old Kenneth Wynne.

"There are no real words for it. It's just a lot of pain and hurt that cannot be fixed."
TAMMY MARQUARDT

The Crown called her an impoverished, struggling young mother who killed her son in a moment of frustration.

Smith, who was stripped of his medical licence last week for professional misconduct and incompetence, testified persuasively that Kenneth was strangled or suffocated.

"It was very much a case of her against the pathology," her lawyer, James Lockyer, told the court.

Border buzz: U.S. overdoses on security

Border attention hasn't been this high since the weeks and months following 9-11 A report suggests Islamic terrorists are more likely to enter the U.S. from Canada than from Mexico

A handful of American senators placed the U.S.-Canada border under ever-harsher spotlight Thursday by asking for the military's help in patrolling the expansive boundary.

Democratic senators from states located near or along the 6,400-kilometre border are asking the U.S. Department of Defence to provide military radar in an effort to nab drug traffickers who use low-flying aircraft to move their product from Canada into the United States.

New York Senator Charles Schumer is leading the charge and sent a letter yesterday to Defence Secretary Robert Gates and Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano to formally request help.

From 2004 to 2009, seizures of ecstacy increased sixfold.

Schumer said statistics from media reports and Homeland Security show that drug smuggling from Canada into the U.S. is on a dramatic upswing.

According to a region-by-region report he released, border seizures of marijuana increased by 22 per cent from 2007 to 2009. Heroin and cocaine seizures have also significantly increased in the past few years.

Their move is at odds with Napolitano, who defended bilateral border security, brushing off the findings of a recent congressional report that suggested merely a fraction of the boundary was under "operational control.

"The term 'operational control' is a very narrow term of art, and it does not reflect the infrastructure and technology," she said.

Mubarak's speech disappoints protesters

The mood in Tahrir Square turned to fury from euphoria last night as protesters listened to President Hosni Mubarak's speech.

Mubarak refused to step down and instead handed his powers to his vice-president yesterday, remaining president and ensuring regime control over the reform process.

Even before he finished speaking, people were booing and chanting "Get out!" and "We're not happy!"

Stunned protesters in central Cairo who demanded his ouster waved their shoes in contempt and shouted, "Leave, leave, leave."

Immediately after Mubarak's speech, Vice-President Omar Suleiman called on the protesters to "go home" and asked Egyptians to "unite and look to the future."

The pair of addresses followed a series of dramatic events Thursday night that had raised expectations Mubarak was about to announce his resignation.

Despite weeks of protest, and a promise for reform, President Hosni Mubarak refuses to step down.

30 President Hosni Mubarak has been in power for nearly 30 years.

Police say as a group of students was leaving the school when a student placed an object against the mid-section of another boy, who fell to the ground instantly.

India, Pakistan agree to resume peace talks

- New effort to focus on security and border issues
- Talks broke off after Mumbai terrorist attacks in 2008

GURINDER OSAN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

India and Pakistan announced Thursday they would resume wide-ranging peace talks that were frozen after the 2008 terrorist attacks in the Indian city of Mumbai, which were blamed on Pakistan-based militants.

The U.S. has been pressing the nuclear-armed rivals to restart their peace efforts in hopes that reducing tensions along their border would free Pakistan to focus on its fight against Taliban militants — a key element of U.S. strategy in Afghanistan.

The decision followed talks Sunday between the foreign secretaries of the two countries in Bhutan, the latest in a yearlong string of meetings of top officials intended to rebuild the nations' shattered trust.

A statement released simultaneously in New Delhi and Islamabad said the new talks would focus on counterterrorism, humanitarian issues, peace and security, the disputed Kashmir region and other border issues.

It did not say when talks would begin, but the foreign minister of Pakistan will visit India by July to review their progress.

Pakistan Prime Minister Yousuf Raza Gilani welcomed the talks and praised his Indian counterpart, Manmohan Singh, for the "opening of a new chapter in the relations between the two countries, which Pakistan fully reciprocates."

But there is little expectation of a rapid agreement to end the six-decade conflict between the bitter rivals. Even if negotiators managed to bridge the gaps on everything from regional water sharing to sovereignty over a disputed creek, there is no guarantee that the shaky Pakistani government, or even the more stable Indian administration, could sell such a deal to their parliaments and their people.

India and Pakistan have fought three wars — two of them over Kashmir — since they won independence from Britain in 1947.

RCMP acts on Taser findings

New policy

- The Mounties issued a new Taser policy last May, saying they would fire stun guns at people only when they're hurting someone.
- The commission for public complaints released its interim findings on the Dziekanski case in December 2009. It concluded the conduct of the four members who responded to the airport call fell far short of expectations.

The RCMP's watchdog says the national police force is addressing all 16 recommendations on Taser use that came out of the Robert Dziekanski case.

The issues range from officer training to regular testing of the weapons.

The Commission for Public Complaints Against the RCMP also said Thursday the force has accepted almost all of its 23 findings in an investigation of the tragic incident.

Dziekanski died in October 2007 after he was hit with a Mountie Taser at the Vancouver airport. He was en route from Poland to join his mother in Kamloops, B.C., where he hoped to begin a new life.

A video of the confrontation filmed by a fellow passenger, in which an agitated and sweaty Dziekanski is zapped repeatedly, was seen by millions of people — stirring public outrage.

Last December, RCMP Commissioner William Elliott responded to the commission, accepting all but one of its 23 findings.

‘Lucy’ liked to walk: Report

Ancient foot bone shows human-like walking possible for ancestor

A team of researchers that got a first look at a foot bone from famous fossil Lucy, who lived three million or more years ago, have concluded this ancestor was fully comfortable with life on the ground, rather than in trees.

Carol Ward of the University of Missouri, and colleagues, report in Friday’s edition of the journal Science that the discovery shows that ancient Australopithecus afarensis had feet similar to modern humans.

Lucy is the poster girl for her group of ancient hominins. The study of her other bones showed she was able to stand upright. But no foot bones were found with her skeleton, so researchers have puzzled over whether she walked like modern people or was a blend of ground- and tree-dweller.

The new discovery shows these relatives “were fully human-like and committed to life on the ground,” Ward said in a telephone interview from Africa.

“It lays to rest the idea that they were a compromise.”

Father of missing girls active on Internet

The father of missing Swiss twins trawled the Internet for information on firearms, poisons and suicide days before he apparently killed himself in Italy, Swiss police said Thursday.

An international search for the blond six-year-olds, Alessia and Livia, has been underway since Jan. 30, when their Swiss mother reported them missing.

Police spokesman Jean-Christophe Sauterel told reporters Thursday night that analysis of the father’s work computer had turned up the websites, which also included ferry schedules.

Matthias Kaspar Schepp, 43, was found dead Feb. 3 in the Italian city of Cerignola, east of Naples.

Police believe he threw himself under a train. His Audi A6 was found parked near the station, with no child car seats or children’s clothing inside.

Schepp had been given custody of his daughters for the weekend, but did not return them to their mother, Irina Lucidi, as planned.

▶ Minister of Justice and Attorney General Rob Nicholson speaks Thursday during a news conference in Ottawa regarding Bill S-10.

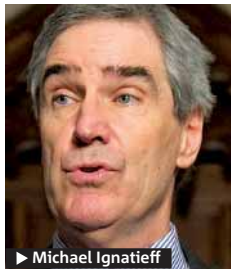
Feds fire shots over crime bill

Tories blast Ignatieff for not supporting legislation
Grits answer back, accusing government of hiding costs

The battle lines were firmly drawn Thursday for a bitter federal election fight in which Conservatives and Liberals will be spitting vitriol at each other over who is tougher on crime.

With the possibility of a spring election still hanging over their collective heads, the Tories launched one of their toughest soft-on-crime offensives on the Opposition Liberals. The Liberals punched back, in effect saying, bring it on.

The heated sparring served as a preview of how law-and-order issues could play out on the campaign trail if the Tory minority is defeated and Canadians are forced to the polls in the coming months.



▶ Michael Ignatieff

Justice Minister Rob Nicholson blasted Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff for deciding not to support a bill that would impose mandatory sentences for drug crime. Nicholson, along with retired Ontario police chief-turned-Tory MP Julian Fantino, repeatedly called Ignatieff a "flip-flopper" on the issue.

"I think they have a lot of explaining to do to people who are very concerned about drug trafficking in this country," Nicholson told a news conference.

But the Liberals immediately fired back, as the party's public safety critic, Mark Holland, accused the government of hiding the true cost of the bill, which many groups — from churches, to health-care workers, to lawyers — also oppose. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prison blues

The federal government's new tough-on-crime laws are going to mean more guards and more crowding in cell blocks, says the head of the prison system.

- Don Head, commissioner of the Correctional Service of Canada, says he can't release an overall estimate of the costs of all the proposed legislation. He did say he's going to have to hire 4,000 more people over the next two years.
- Most of the new people will be guards, although there will also be new nurses, psychologists, social workers, parole officers and support staff.
- The crackdown on crime will also mean more crowding in cell blocks, at least until new prison construction is complete.
- Double-bunking in prisons had been running at about 10 per cent for years, but has crept up to around 13 per cent today and it will get worse, he said. "We anticipate, as we move through this process of building new units that were announced, that we will reach levels of up to 20, 30 per cent of double-bunking before those units are actually complete and give me some bed relief to move people back to single cells."
- Head admitted that his $2.46-billion budget is going to be squeezed by a combination of a growing prison population and government-mandated spending freezes and saving requirements.
- Head said the Harper government's truth-in-sentencing law limiting credit for pre-trial detention, passed in the fall of 2009, has helped push the prison population up by about 400 people this year.

JUDGES

A newly appointed judge's speedy transition from active politics to the bench is raising questions about politicization of the judiciary under Stephen Harper.

Brian Abrams was among a raft of judicial appointments announced last Friday by the Harper government.

He was named to the family division of Ontario's Superior Court of Justice — less than two months after resigning as the federal Conservative candidate in Kingston.

In total, the Liberals maintain the Harper government has appointed 39 judges with Tory ties since the 2008 election.

Ehud Barak: A broken leader?

A decade ago, Ehud Barak was a popular Israeli prime minister and war hero on the verge of making historic peace with Syria and the Palestinians. Today, he is widely reviled as the country's most despised leader.

In his current post of defence minister, Barak has created enemies everywhere and is blamed for everything from the collapse of peace talks with the Palestinians to the disintegration of the Labour Party and infighting in the military.

In recent months, he has become a liability for Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. Seen as a lone centrist in a coalition dominated by hardline ideologues, Barak has played a key role in the government, projecting moderation and responsibility to the general public and to the international community. In particular, he still serves as the prime minister's point man to the United States.

BERNAT ARMANGUE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Barak's days in politics could well be numbered.

He shook up the political scene last month when he defected from the centre-left Labour Party, depriving him of a strong political base. But with the Israeli media lambasting him almost daily and the public angry over his political machinations, his days in politics could be numbered. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli woman was afraid to visit Palestinian area, let alone give birth there But 'they treated me very nicely, like a member of the family'

An Israeli woman has given birth in a Palestinian hospital, an extremely rare occurrence that won her flowers and a handwritten note from the Palestinian president.

Nisreen Chayedri, 30, who grew up Jewish but converted to Islam, says she was shopping in the West Bank town of Ramallah on Wednesday when she went into labour. Her husband, an Arab citizen of Israel, rushed her to the nearest hospital, where she delivered a baby boy.

Israel bars its Jewish citizens from visiting Palestinian areas because of security concerns. Its Arab citizens may visit those areas, though few use the Palestinian medical system, which is far less developed than the Israeli one. In contrast, Palestinians often seek treatment at more advanced Israeli hospitals for specialized procedures.

The arrival of Chayedri — who speaks only Hebrew and lives in northern Israel — caused a stir at the hospital, though she says she got VIP treatment. A Hebrew-speaking doctor translated for her as she delivered a baby boy, weighing 2.3 kilograms. Chayedri and her husband named the boy Omri, a name used by both Jews and Arabs.

Mazel tov

LOUISA GOULIAMAKI/AFP/GETTY IMAGES

Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas caught wind of the birth and ordered the hospital not to charge her, said Health Minister Fathi Abu Mughli. He also sent flowers and a handwritten card.

Chayedri said she was scared to be in the Palestinian territories for the first time, but was impressed with the hospital. "They treated me very nicely, like a member of the family," she said.

Ramallah's mayor and other local officials visited her in the hospital, she said.

Abu Mughli said the hospital treats patients regardless of religion or nationality and that he hoped the birth would help Israelis and Palestinians build "normal relations that will allow many Israeli patients to come to Palestinian hospitals."

No trial for police-dog handler

The case of an Alberta man who launched a rare private prosecution against an Edmonton police-dog handler charged with aggravated assault is unlikely to go to trial.

The Crown elected to stay the charge against Sgt. Bruce Edwards, saying the officer was acting within "police parameters" when he shot Kirk Steele four times after the fleeing man stabbed his dog Wizzard with a steak knife. Prosecutors said there wasn't a reasonable likelihood of conviction.

Private action

Steele launched the private prosecution after a judge acquitted him of two charges stemming from the incident in 2006. The judge ruled that Edwards breached Steele's charter rights.

More Quotes = More Savings On Car Insurance

Do You Love Shopping Around For The Best Deal?

If you're like most people, you'll often spend hours doing research, checking flyers, looking for specials, and running from one store to another to make sure you get the best possible price on everyday items such as; clothes, electronics, furniture, and even groceries. Nothing beats the thrill of knowing you paid less for something by shopping at one place instead of the other, right? It all adds up – the time you invest and knowing where to go to get the best deals could end up saving you a bundle in the long run.

When Was The Last Time You Shopped for Car Insurance?

Sadly, even the smartest shoppers often don't spend nearly the same amount of time and energy shopping for car insurance as they do for other items. After all, car insurance can be confusing, it never goes "on sale" (it only seems to get more expensive), it isn't much "fun" to buy, and it seems like no one place always has the best prices. But what if one place compared the rates from over 30 insurance companies? And what if it would only take about 10 minutes? And what if you could end up saving hundreds, or even thousands of dollars? This is where InsuranceHotline.com can help by providing a free unbiased rate comparison service for your driving profile that can connect you with the lowest rate available through our large network of licensed brokers and agents.

What's The Quickest And Easiest Way To Pay Less?

In the end, saving on car insurance isn't much different than saving on everyday items. You simply need to search for that "better deal", check around for competing quotes, and know where to look. The advantage of starting your process with InsuranceHotline.com is that you only have to go to one place that accesses the rates from over 30 insurance companies, saving you the time and frustration of getting quotes individually from different insurers. In fact, you don't even have to leave the comfort of your own home to find out how much you could be saving on your car insurance.

Don't Be Fooled By Others Offering To "Compare Quotes"

Unlike most of its competitors, InsuranceHotline.com does not sell insurance, is not a licensed broker or agent, and is not owned in whole or in part by an insurance company. This allows InsuranceHotline.com to be unbiased when providing insurance quotes and keeps its focus solely on finding lower insurance rates for consumers. By contrast, most websites offering to "compare insurance quotes" are owned by or affiliated with insurance brokers or agents and are therefore only capable of quoting rates from the limited number of insurance companies they represent, typically no more than 4 or 5.

Rate Comparison

Driving Record	Lowest Price	Highest Price	Savings
Clean Record	$958	$2,213	$1,255
1 Ticket	$1,018	$2,552	$1,534

No NHL team? No guarantee? No problem!

Quebec City moving ahead with plans to build pro hockey arena City mayor will solicit Gary Bettman

There's no federal cash, no private sector commitment and absolutely no guarantee that NHL hockey will ever return.

But Quebec City has announced it will nonetheless begin construction within several months on a new NHL-style hockey arena — with or without any involvement from Ottawa or private industry.

The announcement came after months of spirited national debate was prompted by the prospect of federal tax dollars being used to build an arena for a non-existent NHL team.

The projects's backers announced Thursday that, without any guarantee of outside cash pouring in, they were going with Plan B.

Mayor Regis Labeaume and Premier Jean Charest told a crowded news conference that the project will proceed with a 50-50 funding arrangement between the province and city.

The mayor said he planned to discuss the matter immediately with NHL bosses.

"I will announce in the coming hours to the commissioner of the National Hockey League, Gary Bettman, that Quebec City will go ahead with the construction of a new multi-purpose amphitheatre in partnership with the Quebec government," Labeaume said Thursday.

Charest says the province will increase its funding commitment and is now ready to pay half the arena cost — as long as the total price tag doesn't exceed $400 million.

Charest says the door is always open if Ottawa or the private sector want to contribute later.

But there were some notable absences at Thursday's news conference: Nobody was there from Ottawa or from Quebecor Inc., the media empire that has been talking about bringing NHL hockey back to Quebec City.

The city's initial financing plan fell apart when Ottawa, fearing a national backlash, resisted the request for roughly $200 million in public funds.

Trenton cops facing allegations of assault

The Special Investigations Unit has been called in to probe an alleged sexual assault by Quinte West provincial police officers.

A Trenton, Ont., woman claims she was sexually and physically assaulted by unidentified Quinte West officers.

Phillips said the SIU will not be issuing any further details during the investigation.

Justice minister calls on Assange to turn himself in

- Swedish representative says he has nothing to fear
- WikiLeaks supporters insist charges are trumped up

MATT DUNHAM/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Julian Assange

WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange should turn himself in for questioning in a Swedish rape investigation and has no reason to worry about not getting a fair trial, Sweden's justice minister said Thursday.

Beatrice Ask's comments to The Associated Press reveal the irritation among senior Swedish officials at the arguments used by Assange's lawyers in fighting his extradition in a British court, where closing arguments are set for Friday.

The lawyers defending Assange, who is accused of sexual misconduct against two Swedish women, say a closed-door trial in Sweden would represent "a flagrant denial of justice."

They also say he risks being handed over to the United States, which is investigating whether Assange's secret-spilling website should be held responsible for leaking classified information.

Assange "has a lot of prejudice," Ask said in an interview at the Swedish parliament.

"Everyone is equal before the law. He is suspected, accused of a serious crime and should, of course, present himself for interrogation," she said.

WikiLeaks has angered the U.S. and other governments by publishing secret military documents on the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq. Assange's supporters say the rape allegations are trumped up and possibly politically motivated, charges the women's lawyer has denied.

STAYING AFLOAT

Airline flying high

The country's largest airline, said profits rose to $134 million during the fourth quarter, more than double the losses they booked last year.

The airline capped a strong year by leveraging the economic recovery to attract more business travellers going to international destinations.

"The results reported today confirm that we are indeed headed in the right direction," CEO Calin Rovinescu said.

The latest quarterly results included foreign exchange gains of $111 million.

Earnings per share came in at 42 cents compared to a loss of 25 cents per share a year ago.

For the full fiscal year, Air Canada reported a net profit of $107 million, compared to a loss of $24 million in 2009.

"2010 was a great year ... and I believe that the progress achieved thus far positions us closer to our goal of sustained profitability," Rovinescu told analysts.

The full-year results took into account a load factor of 81.7 per cent, which the company said is the highest in its history.

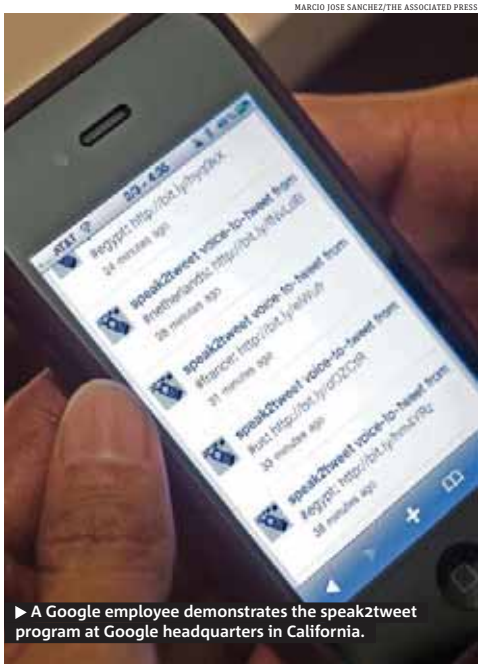
Google and Facebook are 'tweet on Twitter

MARCIO JOSE SANCHEZ/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS



▶ A Google employee demonstrates the speak2tweet program at Google headquarters in California.

Talks have valued Twitter at approximately $8B to $10B

Google and Facebook are both sniffing around Twitter with an eye to buying the social networking service.

Sources tell the Wall Street Journal that the talks have valued Twitter at between $8 billion and $10 billion US.

The same sources say Twitter had revenue of $45 million in 2010, but lost money as it hired and invested in data centres.

Investors have shown keen interest in social networking services.

Twitter has had a popular role in organizing international political protest as in the recent uprising in Egypt and last year's protests in Iran.

Some have called the site "the medium of the movement." In some situations, it has been a source for news updates.

It seems governments have caught the Twitter bug, too.

In Canada, Calgary Mayor Naheed Nenshi tweeted updates about his campaign platform.

Yesterday, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations hosted a global town hall at Twitter headquarters to talk foreign policy with users of the online messaging service.

Last month, daily coupon website Groupon raised $950 million in financing after reportedly turning down Google's offer to purchase it for $6 billion.

Twitter and Facebook declined to comment. Google did not immediately respond to messages seeking comment.

▶ Molson Coors blames poor financial results on rising costs for taxes, ingredients and fuel.

Molson Coors sells less beer, pays more tax

◐ Net income fell 51 per cent in fourth quarter ◐ But U.S. joint venture with SABMiller performed better

Molson Coors Brewing Co.'s net income fell 51 per cent in the fourth quarter as it sold less beer and dealt with rising costs for taxes, ingredients and fuel.

The American-Canadian brewer earned $109.8 million, or 58 cents per share, for the quarter that ended Dec. 25. That's down from $222.1 million, or $1.19 per share, a year earlier.

Last year's quarter was boosted by an unusually high tax rate, the company said. The results fell short of analysts' forecasts. They were looking for earnings of 69 cents per share on revenue of $837.4 million.

Molson Coors sold 1.9 per cent less beer globally in the fourth quarter of 2010.

The Denver-based company raised prices in the downturn to protect profit margins, even if the amount of beer sold suffered as a result. Before the fourth quarter, cost-cutting had been helping its profits rise.

Molson Coors says it sold 1.9 per cent less beer globally. The United Kingdom was particularly weak, with beer sold falling 4.9 per cent.

To offset weakness in more established markets, Molson Coors is increasingly trying to expand in emerging markets such as China. The aim is to woo new drinkers to its Coors Light brand. The unit that includes sales outside the U.S., Canada and Britain saw volume rise 55 per cent, though it is still a tiny portion of Molson Coors' business.

GROWING SALES

Shoppers surprises analysts

Shoppers Drug Mart Corp. is boosting its dividend by more than 10 per cent after the pharmacy retailer reported better than expected fourth quarter results and growing sales.

Canada's largest drug store chain says it earned $171.2 million, or 79 cents per share, which was relatively flat compared with last year's $171 million.

However, the company beat analysts' expectations of 75 cents per share.

Revenue was $2.56 billion, up from $2.49 billion a year ago but short of the Street's call for $2.58 billion.

The company also announced it would boost its quarterly dividend to 25 cents per share.

▶ Psychotherapist and relationship expert Kimberly Moffit recommends setting the record straight with your significant other to avoid a V-Day meltdown.

5 MINUTES WITH: KIMBERLY MOFFIT

The relationship counsellor offers tips on how to make Valentine's Day memorable for all the right reasons.

Feb. 14 can be a charged and loaded day. What's a good way to ease the anxiety?
Talk to your partner beforehand to set realistic expectations. Where are you at in your relationship? What kinds of things make you and your partner feel special? You can ease the stress by coming up with unusual, fun and memorable activities, but eliminate the expectation of expensive gifts.

Why do you think so many women (and men) get worked up about it?
As humans, we naturally compare ourselves to other couples. When we see commercials advertising Valentine's Day we try to compete with the standard of gift shown in the media — expensive jewelry, clothing — things that don't have to do with Valentine's Day at all.

What do you feel are reasonable and unreasonable expectations?
It's unfair to expect anything at all unless you've had a talk with your partner about where both of you stand. If you've established you're giving gifts and have set a dollar value, that's reasonable. Anything else is not.

Worst thing you can do/say?
"My ex-boyfriend or girlfriend took me to the ROM for valentine's and it was amazing" — Comparisons of any kind are unfair and destructive to the relationship.

Best thing you can do/say?
Be appreciative of them as a partner — not the things you'll receive.

Dating someone new can also make for some confusing scenarios. What's the most appropriate way to handle the date around a new romance?
A new relationship around V-Day can be intimidating, but also extremely romantic and fun. My best advice is to stick to something light and fun — enough to show the person that you're interested romantically, but without going completely over-the-top. A simple rose, homemade dinner, and chocolates should get the sparks flying without creeping him/her out.

What's the smartest way to handle V-Day disappointment?
Check in with yourself before confronting your partner. Ask yourself why your expectations were so high in the first place. Are you disappointed with the gift you got, or your partner in general? If you choose to confront your partner, be honest and don't insult them. Gently tell them why you felt disappointed and what they can do to fix the problem next time.

Fridays on your mind

Letters & Tweets

If you're anything like us, Fridays just haven't been the same since Family Matters went off the air. So, after more than a decade of hollow, Urkel-less Friday evenings, we asked you for tips on how to unwind from a hectic work week.

@t_stark_calgary: Best Friday is: Go home and relax with my wife & a good movie. Key: Turn off the cellphone and 'puter for the night. Be human.

@vanrestomngr: Gonna find my baby gonna hold her tight gonna grab some afternoon delight. Sky rockets in flight. Afternoon delight.

@crestsofwaves: I relax by watching TV or listen to music.

@jterr88: The No. 1 response has to be: Happy Hour!

@kimmcneilyoga: I teach yoga on Fridays. It's (almost) as good as taking a class because my students are great!

@kimmcneilyoga: Plus, afterwards I go out for a yummy meal with a good friend. It's a weekly ritual.

@iamaimee: drink homemade melon and vanilla shake while sitting on a massage chair and watching a good movie with the fam. :)

Metro Minute with Les Ballets Trockadero

With the latest Black Swan parody to hit the web courtesy of Mad TV's Ms. Swan (YouTube this immediately, by the way), ballerinas are this year's hot emo vampires. Seriously, they're everywhere. Did you see all those goth tutus that hit the runways last season? Exactly.

We prefer our ballet a little more Ms. Swan and a little less Black Swan, which is why we're tickled by Les Ballets Trockadero de Monte Carlo's three-day engagement this weekend at the Winter Garden Theatre. The company is comprised of a troupe of gifted male dancers who perform classical repertoire ... in drag. It's like English Renaissance theatre, only with more tights. Tickets are available through Ticketmaster. JORDANA DIVON

Tammy Whetham
Yes ... I still don't feel like I know everything I should ... So many students go through university without a clue and then graduate with $20,000 of debt and are screwed.

Getting Bieber fever

Richard Crouse and Mark Breslin debate Justin Bieber: Never Say Never Early footage of Canadian superstar give music documentary a heart

Richard Crouse: Mark, generally these kind of music biographies are simply made up of backstage footage and embarrassing childhood photos wedged in between the tunes, and this movie is kind of like that as well, but what really sold me on the film was the picture it painted of Bieber before he got famous.

Mark Breslin: I don't think either of us is the target demographic for the movie. I've had very little exposure to the Bieber phenomenon, so the movie was fresh to my eyes. Yes, I liked the footage of Bieber before he was famous, especially the bit of him playing competent drums on a chair at a very early age.

Plot synopsis

▶ Justin Bieber: Never Say Never is a 3-D story of a pop prodigy who mastered a drum kit before he was 10 years old and sold out Madison Square Garden when he was barely old enough to drive. Using a mix of archival and concert footage, it follows Bieber from his humble beginnings in Stratford, Ont., to superstardom.

▶ Ratings:
Richard's: ●●●
Mark's: ●●½

RC: To say we're not the target market is an understatement, like saying that Justin Bieber has a few female fans, but there's no denying that the kid has talent. The music in the concert sequences sounds like white noise to my ears, but in the early footage of him playing and singing on the streets of Stratford and drumming with a local band is pretty impressive. I thought the movie presented him as being less pre-packaged than other teen stars. What did you think?

MB: Well, that's what they'd like us to think. There are a lot of references to how Bieber achieved his success without the Disney or Nickelodeon machines, and that's true. He is the product of some grass roots push, and I found the footage of that very interesting. But when his manager — who is more likable than most — calls him the "underdog" I call that spin. Or even more proof that the Internet has created a new business model. And what did you think of the 3-D?

RC: The "underdog" reference was the most glaringly disingenuous thing in the movie. Anyone selling out Madison Square Garden in under half-an-hour is not an underdog — anything but. If anything, he is as you say, a new kind of business model — fame by YouTube. How 21st Century. Makes the American Idol format seem weathered and tired. As for the 3-D, it works in the concert sequences, less so in the documentary sequences but the little girls will love how Bieber seems to jump off the screen.

MB: Jump off the screen indeed! Scary — I really didn't need the moppet in my lap!

Not enough action to carry Eagle

The Eagle
Genre: Action
Director: Kevin Macdonald
Stars: Channing Tatum, Jamie Bell, Donald Sutherland

Kevin Macdonald's The Eagle isn't a particularly bad movie, it's just confused and flawed. The Touching The Void director can't decide if he's making a handsome historical epic or a sweaty action thriller and ends up with a muddled mixture that won't satisfy the audience for either genre.

The dependably bland Channing Tatum plays a young Roman soldier who ventures into the wilds of Roman-occupied Britain to honour his father's memory by recapturing his lost legion's golden eagle statue. An English slave (Jamie Bell) accompanies him and their relationship is stretched and flipped throughout the journey.

The dynamic between the two central characters is intriguing, but Tatum boasts about as much charisma and acting ability as a piece of petrified wood with pectoral implants, and Bell seems bored by his co-star.

Thanks to miscasting and confused writing, the action sequences work better than the character scenes and there isn't nearly enough action to carry the film. With a stronger lead and tighter pacing, The Eagle could have been interesting. Instead, it's merely frustrating with moments that suggest what could have been. ● PHIL BROWN

Grace, Milly, Lucy...Child Soldiers
Genre: Documentary
Director: Raymonde Provencher
●●●½

As its title suggests, Grace, Milly, Lucy…Child Soldiers tries to locate individual experiences within a problem that's too often discussed in terms of helpless statistics: the use of young children — mostly girls — as fighters within Uganda's brutal Lord's Resistance Army. This is a clear-eyed and empathetic piece of documentary filmmaking.
● ADAM NAYMAN

Cedar Rapids
Genre: Comedy
Director: Miguel Arteta
Stars: Ed Helms, John C. Reilly and Anne Heche
●●

Cedar Rapids is best described as a Sundance comedy; a character-based movie that is not a laugh a minute. It's not even a laugh every five minutes, which is a shame given the talent involved. Ed Helms plays a small town schlub exposed to sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll at an insurance convention in the "big" city of Cedar Rapids. There's too much space between the funny bits to call this an outright comedy. ● RICHARD CROUSE

Biutiful
Genre: Drama
Director: Alejandro González Iñárritu
Stars: Javier Bardem, Maricel Alvarez, Guillermo Estrella
●●●●

Writer/director Alejandro González Iñárritu departs from his usual multi-character epics to focus on a single man (Javier Bardem) struggling to come to terms with his low-level criminal existence and set things right with his children before succumbing to cancer. Iñárritu transforms the material into a starkly realistic character study with fleeting moments of emotionally-driven surrealism.
● PHIL BROWN

Gnomeo & Juliet
Genre: Animation
Director: Kelly Asbury
Stars: James McAvoy, Emily Blunt
●●●

Shakespeare gets a 3-D animated makeover in Gnomeo & Juliet, a wacky retelling of the bard's most famous play about two star-crossed lovers who were not meant to fall in love. In this case, the suitors are clay garden gnomes from warring lawns. It's a thin premise likely originated from the novelty title alone but the film's light zaniness actually plays well on-screen. Clever gags and wordplay carry the film.
● STEVE GOW

Just Go With It
Genre: Comedy
Director: Dennis Dugan
Stars: Jennifer Aniston, Adam Sandler, Nicole Kidman
●●●

The dark clouds hovering over Jennifer Aniston and Adam Sandler's careers may have lifted at least temporarily thanks to this sweetly funny, fetching and family friendly rom-com about lying. Sandler's a plastic surgeon who spins a ruse to win a woman that is so daring that it takes his assistant (Aniston), her children and his best friend to make it work. The actors playing Aniston's kids are cute too. ● ANNE BRODIE

Unauthorized: The Harvey Weinstein Project
Genre: Documentary
Director: Barry Avrich
●½

Barry Avrich's documentary is an example of a film that burnishes its subject's mythology under the guise of interrogating it. It's unlikely that this film could do more to advance the idea of the Miramax co-founder as a genius if he had made it himself. The slick, TV-magazine presentation doesn't help matters: Avrich speckles his dodgy insights together with endless paparazzi snaps of Weinstein. ● ADAM NAYMAN

From Prada To Nada
Genre: Comedy
Director: Angel Gracia
Stars: Camilla Belle, Alexa Vega, Adriana Barraza
●½

From Prada To Nada is a Beverly Hills update of Jane Austin's Sense And Sensibility in the Clueless vain, but without the sense of invention or the strong character comedy. The film follows two rich young Latino sisters whose father suddenly dies and leaves them penniless, forcing them to move to a poor neighbourhood and learn how to appreciate the simple pleasures of life. The message is sweet, but it's hardly original.
● PHIL BROWN

Modra
Genre: Drama
Director: Ingrid Veninger
Stars: Hallie Switzer, Alexander Gammal, Mathieu Chesneau
●●●

A very sweet and delicate love story that bears flattering resemblance to Before Sunrise. First time actors Hallie Switzer and Alexander Gammal star as a pair of teens who embark on a romantic trip to Slovakia despite barely knowing each other. Canadian filmmaker Ingrid Veninger cast the film almost entirely with family members and gets extraordinarily naturalistic performances out of a group of non-actors.

Sci-fi meets teen drama

I Am Number Four based on successful novel
But director started adaptation before book's publication
Saw potential for a 'good old-fashioned' genre film

PHIL BROWN
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

In a manner reminiscent of popular blockbusters from the 1980s, I Am Number Four combines sci-fi action spectacle with teen drama.

Director DJ Caruso (Disturbia) is not only aware of these similarities, but actually cultivated them. "I have five kids and I've been trying for years to make a good old-fashioned Amblin film like The Goonies," Caruso told Metro.

"Unlike huge franchises like Twilight or Harry Potter, there were no preconceived notions of what the movie would be."
DIRECTOR DJ CARUSO

"When I got this script I immediately felt like it was the one. I loved the way it combined action and science fiction with the story of a kid who realizes that who he wants to become and who he can become are two different people. That seemed like a simple, relatable story that would be perfect to hang a genre movie on."

The film is about a teen who seems like everyone else, except that he's secretly one of the last members of an extinct alien race that is slowly being picked off by reptilian assassins.

Though based on a successful novel, Caruso surprisingly started his adaptation before the source material had even been published.

"When I read the manuscript it still had typos and red writing in the margins," recalled the director.

"But it was liberating because unlike huge franchises like Twilight or Harry Potter, there were no preconceived notions of what the movie would be. No one could get mad with me because they don't know what to expect."

Caruso was also lucky enough to have the benefit of launching a franchise with two seasoned blockbuster veterans serving as creative producers: Steven Spielberg and Michael Bay.

"Steven was very involved in developing the script, and then Michael helped me with the visual effects in post," said Caruso. "They were helpful bookends on the production and I couldn't have done it without them because this was new territory for me."

Breakout role for Pettyfer?

Alex Pettyfer has learned rather quickly that he has a real hankering for stunt work, even if it can get a bit dangerous sometimes.

"You kind of want to get hurt, because it gives you more adrenaline; it gives you more pump," says 20-year-old Pettyfer. "But yeah, I love the whole action aspect of it."

Luckily, his latest starring role as the lead teenage alien stranded on Earth in I Am Number Four, gave him plenty of opportunity to scratch that particular itch.

Though as a teen he starred in the British spy flick Stormbreaker and followed that up with a pair of films, I Am Number Four feels like a real beginning for Pettyfer. "This is the first thing that's come out that I'm very, very proud of," he says. ● NED EHRBAR

Jones heats up Hollywood

Three big-screen thrillers are in the works for Mad Men actress Up first: Unknown with Liam Neeson

STEVE GOW
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

January Jones has finally come back to the future.

The star of the 1960s-set TV drama Mad Men, Jones is now establishing herself in Hollywood with no less than three big-screen thrillers in the works — starting with Unknown, which hits theatres Feb. 18.

"I'm a fan of all kinds of movies," said Jones recently in Los Angeles.

"If they're intelligently done, (thrillers) just make you think. They're sometimes stimulating to a point where you forget where you are and what you're doing and who you are and you're just invested in this snowball of craziness."

In Unknown, Jones's character is married to a man (Liam Neeson) who, after an accident in Germany, awakens from a coma to discover that nobody recognizes him — including his wife.

"It's probably hardest for me (to discuss the film) because I can't go into detail about my character… so let's talk about something else," laughed Jones.

"It's great to talk about this movie because I'm a fan of it. I saw it a couple weeks ago and you're always nervous going in — you don't know if you're going to be promoting something you don't like, but I really enjoyed watching it… so I'm happy to be promoting it."

Jones also relished working with Neeson, who after the 2008 thriller Taken, has established himself as the perfect empathetic anti-hero for movies like Unknown.

"Casting in any movie is important but in this one specifically I think that Liam had the perfect balance of someone you believe could be the good guy/bad guy — whatever he is," said Jones attempting to not reveal a plot twist. "He's also just a wonderful actor — you kind of believe whatever he's selling."

Jones' other upcoming movie titles:

- The Hungry Rabbit Jumps: After his wife is assaulted, Nicolas Cage enlists others to help him seek vengeance.
- X-Men: First Class: A prequel to the other X-Men thrillers, Jones plays a telepathic mutant named Emma Frost.

Unknown

- Twist ending: "I don't think there are any clues," said Jones of the film's twist ending. "I think (director Jaume Collett-Serra) purposely left them out. It's not underestimating the audience in any way."

Sunset's cast glows

Jackson and Jones team up for bare bones two-man TV movie

HBO, DAWN JONES/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A college professor distraught about his life and the state of the world hurls himself in front of a subway train. He is rescued by a born-again ex-convict.

We don't witness this event. The Sunset Limited takes place wholly in the rescuer's one-room tenement apartment, where he has brought the would-be suicide to try convincing him that his life has value and is worth holding onto.

Between this pair of lonely strangers, a spirited – in many ways – debate ensues.

The Sunset Limited stars Tommy Lee Jones as the tormented atheist (labeled, simply, White) who has abandoned all hope for mankind and "the primacy of the intellect," and Samuel L. Jackson as a killer-turned-believer (dubbed Black) who claims he doesn't know anything that's not straight from the Bible.

Black wants to argue White out of making another suicide attempt. White, though repeatedly starting for the door, sticks around to make his own bleak case and defy the other man's hard-won faith.

Premiering Saturday at 9 p.m. EST on HBO, The Sunset Limited is gripping, disturbing and, at times, mordantly funny.

The Sunset Limited is remarkably animated for such a scaled-down film, propelled by two fine performances and drawn from the 2006 play of the same name by Cormac McCarthy, Pulitzer-prize-winning author of such novels as Blood Meridian, All the Pretty Horses and No Country for Old Men, which became a hit 2007 Oscar winner in which Jones starred.

"I read the play some time ago and I always liked it, was fascinated by it," says Jones during a recent joint interview with Jackson at HBO offices. "I happened to run into Cormac one day in Santa Fe, and I got around to telling him that I thought it would be a good idea to make a film of it. And he agreed with me."

The film, though set in New York City's Harlem, was made in Santa Fe, N.M., in fall 2009, with Jones executive producer as well as director.

Grammy watch: Will Eminem finally earn top honours on Music's Biggest Night on Sunday?

The Eminem Show 2011?

The Grammy Awards are in danger of turning into Eminem's own personal Groundhog Day.

It was undoubtedly his year in 2001.

He had created a twisted masterpiece with his sophomore debut, the equal-opportunity offender The Marshall Mathers LP, which did everything the best rock 'n' roll is supposed to do: electrify the youth, delight the critics, offend the parents, outrage society — only it was a rap album.

And yet, when it came to announce album of the year, the trophy went to ... Steely Dan (10 points if you remember the title of THAT one).

In 2003, he had a strong shot at a Grammy with another top-selling, critically acclaimed CD, The Eminem Show.

And it seemed as if the Recording Academy might finally give Eminem his due coronation.

But a jazzy songbird named Norah Jones enchanted them, and he went home without the prestigious award once again.

Now, it's a new decade and a new Eminem.

He's still got the radioactive tongue, but he's endured a painful drug addiction, personal tragedy and an artistic lapse, yet overcome all of them to create Recovery, an album that riveted millions and earned him a leading 10 Grammy nominations.

He's not only nominated for album, but also for record and song of the year for Love the Way You Lie with Rihanna.

It's looking like an Eminem coronation — but looks can be deceiving, and the Grammys have proven time and time again that things aren't always what they seem ... as we explain.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RECORD OF THE YEAR

Nominees: Nothin' on You, B.o.B featuring Bruno Mars; Love the Way You Lie, Eminem featuring Rihanna; (Expletive) You, Cee Lo Green, pictured; Empire State of Mind, Jay-Z and Alicia Keys; Need You Now, Lady Antebellum.

Analysis: Although Jay-Z and Lady Antebellum both made compelling anthems that still resonate, those tunes are both also at least a year old — and we think Grammy voters will be in a current state of mind when determining the winner. The real race is between Eminem's haunting Love the Way You Lie and Cee Lo's "Glee"-fully foul (Expletive) You. We think the Grammys will try and show they're not the Grannys — as well as honour what frankly was the best record of the year — with (Expletive) You.

JASON DECROW/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SONG OF THE YEAR (songwriters)

Nominees: Beg Steal or Borrow, Ray LaMontagne, songwriter (Ray LaMontagne and the Pariah Dogs); (Expletive) You, Brody Brown, Cee Lo Green, Ari Levine, Philip Lawrence and Bruno Mars, songwriters (Cee Lo Green); The House That Built Me, Tom Douglas and Allen Shamblin, songwriters (Miranda Lambert); Love the Way You Lie, Alexander Grant, Skylar Grey and Marshall Mathers, songwriters (Eminem, pictured, featuring Rihanna); Need You Now, Dave Haywood, Josh Kear, Charles Kelley and Hillary Scott, songwriters (Lady Antebellum).

Analysis: OK, now here's where we think Eminem will catch a break. (Expletive) You is undeniably catchy with its groove and clever with its wit, but telling a story through song? Well, you cannot beat Eminem's twisted love song for that, which weaves a disturbing, dysfunctional and ultimately haunting story arc in brilliant fashion.

ETHAN MILLER/GETTY IMAGES

ALBUM OF THE YEAR

Nominees: The Suburbs, Arcade Fire; Recovery, Eminem; Need You Now, Lady Antebellum; The Fame Monster, Lady Gaga, pictured; Teenage Dream, Katy Perry.

Analysis: This is Eminem's moment. His Recovery was 2010's bestselling album, and it represented a critical rebirth and triumph: He's the obvious choice for album of the year ... but the Grammys rarely pick the obvious choice. Which brings us to Arcade Fire, the rock band that reached a mainstream milestone this year with The Suburbs and had critics swooning. We're thinking some members of the Recording Academy were swept up into this swoon as well, giving them an excuse to put off Eminem once again.

PETER KRAMER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ARTIST

Nominees: Justin Bieber, pictured, Drake, Florence & The Machine, Mumford & Sons; Esperanza Spalding.

Analysis: Usually the pop phenomenon, though a multiplatinum-selling fan favourite, never wins in this category. Britney Spears, Backstreet Boys and the Jonas Brothers are perfect examples. But Christina Aguilera won in 2000, and like Aguilera (pre-Bionic), there's something deeper with Bieber than your typically teen superstar.

He's got competition, but not enough of it. The 16-year-old Bieber is a brand that keeps on building, and the Recording Academy wants in, too.

SUBMITTED

ALTERNATIVE MUSIC ALBUM

Nominees: The Suburbs, Arcade Fire, pictured; Infinite Arms, Band of Horses; Brothers, The Black Keys; Broken Bells, Broken Bells; Contra, Vampire Weekend.

Analysis: Arcade Fire is going to torch the competition in this category, and yes, bad pun intended.

Sheen's mess-ups not affecting Men fans

A whopping 82 per cent of women and 76 per cent of men polled said they will continue watching the show regardless of Sheen's personal issues, and 90 per cent don't consider his behaviour a problem as long as he does his job. And only four per cent of those polled want Sheen to quit the show.

Celebrate love with a little Ménage à Trois...

PETER ROCKWELL
LIQUIDASSETS@EASTLINK.CA
TWITTER: @THEREALWINEGUY

While most thoughts will turn to flowers and chocolates this weekend before Valentine's Day, my mind is on a ménage à trios. Before you start emailing, I mean the wine — not the other thing.

Made in California by the Folie à Deux Winery, the idea behind the cheeky name is that each of the Ménage à Trios wines is created from a trio of grape varieties or, in the case of the chardonnay, the same grape from three different regions in The Golden State.

The 2009 Ménage à Trois Red ($17.95 - $19.99) is made with a triple blend of zinfandel, merlot and cabernet sauvignon.

Rich and ripe with just a kiss of residual sugar, it makes for a great all-purpose dinner wine as well as a mouth-filling on-its-own sipper perfect for a candle lit tête à tête.

Planning on surprising your Valentine with breakfast in bed this Sunday? Enhance the romance with a bottle of sparkling wine. Freixenet's Cordon Rosado Brut ($12.95 - $16.50) from Spain is a sexy, non-vintage bubbly rosé made in the traditional method. Serving-up a bright mix of dry red berries massaged by crisp acidity it's an ideal match for fresh fruit, lighter cheeses and, well, you know.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

In many cultures, rosemary has a long history as an aphrodisiac, an herb with the power to keep fidelity and love strong.

So why not tap that history to grow a little romance of your own on Valentine's Day? This three-course meal isn't speedy, but the effort will win you the admiration of your love.

Cream of Cauliflower and Rosemary Soup

Preparation:

1. In saucepan, melt butter over medium-high; add shallot and rosemary and sauté until shallot is tender, 3 to 4 minutes. Add flour and stir to coat. Cook for 1 minute, whisk in milk and cream.
2. Add cauliflower, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring frequently, until cauliflower is very soft and mixture has thickened.
3. Using an immersion blender or working in batches in a regular blender, puree mixture until very smooth. Adjust seasoning with additional salt and pepper, if needed. Drizzle with rosemary oil.

Rosemary Seared Tenderloin with Honeyed Sweet Potato and Blue Cheese Green Beans

Preparation:

1. Prick sweet potato all over with a fork. Microwave on High for 5 to 6 minutes or until completely tender. Let cool slightly. Peel and mash potato in small bowl. Stir in butter, honey, salt and pepper. Cover and keep warm.
2. Beef Tenderloin: Rub salt and rosemary all over the steaks. In a large oven-safe skillet heat butter and oil over medium-high. Sear steaks on each side until well-browned, 2 to 3 minutes per side. Place skillet in 350 F (180C) oven and cook until meat thermometer inserted in centre reaches 125 F (52 C). Remove from oven, tent with foil and let rest for 10 minutes.
3. Blue Cheese Green Beans: Meanwhile, bring small saucepan of water to boil. Add beans and cover. Boil until bright green and just tender, about 3 minutes. Drain beans, then transfer to a bowl. Add blue cheese, salt and pepper; toss to combine. Sprinkle with almonds, if using.
4. Serve steaks with sweet potato and green beans

Chocolate Prices

Cupid got off easy this Valentine's Day, but spikes in cocoa bean and sugar prices may have the Easter bunny digging deeper into your pocket for those chocolate eggs.

By Easter, prices likely will rise, possibly by as much as five per cent, said Marcia Mogelonsky, U.S.-based global food analyst for Mintel.

There are a few reasons behind the increase, including political turbulence in Ivory Coast, the world's largest producer of cocoa beans, that led to a one-month ban on exports that was announced in late January.

Phil Lempert, a food marketing expert, agrees that with raw materials becoming more expensive, prices are bound to be affected.

See magical sights on a hike of the Bruce Trail

The 885-kilometre trail gives people a lifetime of memories ◆ From Niagara to Tobermory

There's a rocky ledge near the north end of Ontario's long-distance Bruce Trail that has special significance for hikers Rick and Wendy Plume.

The Toronto couple have been there several times — "it's a very beautiful, rugged" part of the trail, says Wendy, describing the bare outcrop high above the waters of Georgian Bay on the Bruce Peninsula.

Four years ago they stopped there to admire the panoramic view with their friend and hiking partner Norm Cornack. It turned out to be Norm's last hike. Shortly afterwards he was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer and died within months on his 48th birthday.

"We're sure that his spirit remains at the top of that cliff," says Rick. "It was his favourite spot. It's ours too."

A story the Plumes submitted about the location, along with a photo, was a winner in a recent contest organized by the Bruce Trail Conservancy, which invited trail users to write about their favourite places.

Stretching 885 kilometres along the Niagara Escarpment, a ridge of land designated in 1990 as a UNESCO world biosphere reserve, the trail is the oldest and longest footpath in Canada. Once the outer rim of a shallow sea, the escarpment spans a diverse range of habitats from Niagara in the south to the village of Tobermory in the north, encompassing vineyards, forests, farms, wetlands, rolling hills, waterfalls and historic sites.

Hiking the trail's full length is not a project to be taken lightly. Covering that distance would be comparable to walking from Toronto to Ottawa and back, and take an estimated 30 days while trekking eight hours a day. And that doesn't take into account the additional 400 kilometres of side trails.

The Bruce Trail Conservancy was conceived in 1960 by Hamilton naturalist Ray Lowes and his schoolteacher chum Robert Bateman — not yet a famous artist — the trail will mark a key milestone next year: the 50th anniversary of the first hike.

That 1962 trek was a highly publicized event with daily dispatches filed by a Toronto newspaper reporter.

- Guide. The 26th edition of The Bruce Trail Reference Guide ($37), updated every two years, can be purchased online at brucetrail.org. As well, individual maps for sections of the trail ($3 each) have recently been made available for download.
- B&Bs. Hikers on the Bruce Peninsula can take advantage of the Home-to-Home network of B&Bs (hometohomenetwork.ca) which will transport luggage from inn to inn. Generally, though, the Bruce Trail does not lend itself to such multi-day trekking.
- Bus. The Toronto Bruce Trail club organizes "bus hikes," with buses taking participants from the city to the trail and back again. Details at torontobrucetrailclub.org/clubhikes.php.

Trading Fisher may be just the first step

It looks like rebuilding plans are underway in the nation's capital.

The struggling Ottawa Senators sent forward Mike Fisher to Nashville Thursday in exchange for the Predators' first-round pick this year and a conditional pick in next year's NHL entry draft.

Senators general manager Bryan Murray expects more changes to be made ahead of the Feb. 28 trade deadline.

"We have a plan in place and an idea that we want to restructure the hockey team to again be a competitive club," Murray said.

Fisher, 30, has played 675 career NHL games — all with the Senators. He has recorded 24 points (14 goals, 10 assists) and 33 penalty minutes in 55 games this season.

Jazz coach ends his 23-year run

Hall of Famer Jerry Sloan stepped down Thursday after 23 seasons and 1,127 wins at the helm of the Utah Jazz, saying he simply ran out of energy to coach anymore.

"I had a feeling this time was the time to move on," an emotional Sloan said during a Thursday afternoon news conference. "(That's) a long time to be in one organization. Again, I've been blessed. Today is a new day. When I get this over with, I'll feel better. My time is up and it's time to move on."

Sloan was the longest-tenured coach in the four major professional sports.

A reunion for Lupul

Newest Leaf excited about chance to play with former junior teammate

Even though Joffrey Lupul is looking at being traded to the Maple Leafs as a fresh start, he's also hoping to draw on his past in Toronto.

Lupul and Leafs forward Clarke MacArthur were teammates when they played for the WHL's Medicine Hat Tigers a few years ago and will skate together on a line with Tyler Bozak in Toronto.

Lupul was fitted for some new equipment Thursday prior to making his Leafs debut against New Jersey. Toronto acquired the 27-year-old winger from Anaheim Wednesday in exchange for Francois Beauchemin. The Leafs also received a prospect and conditional draft pick in the deal.

Leafs lose

Ilya Kovalchuk scored the winning goal in overtime Thursday as the Devils beat the Leafs 2-1.

"I started to see this deal coming down and was able to make some adjustments to our lines in anticipation of this happening," said coach Ron Wilson. "I think for the beginning, you might as well play a guy who is familiar with someone in the past ... Hopefully, we can blend him in and get him feeling at home right away."

Lupul is two years older than MacArthur and was the Tigers' top player during the season they were teammates. When they shared the ice back then, it was clear who was running the offence.

"I think he almost scored a goal every game in junior," said MacArthur. "He was a guy you were trying to get the puck to. I remember we played the power play together a lot and my sole job was basically to load him up for one-timers.

"I know he's a great shooter. I'll be looking for him."

Lupul arrived in Toronto Wednesday night and went through a physical almost immediately after landing. That was important because he sat out nearly a year with a back injury and subsequent blood infection before working his way back into Anaheim's lineup Dec. 5.

NO MORE FIFTH BUSINESS

Opinion

RUSSELL
FIELD OF PLAY

The Canadian home Olympics are a year gone. But a change in attitude lingers.

While we rejoice in 14 gold medals and 26 podium results, the close encounters are more indicative of a seismic shift in expectations on the part of Canadian competitors.

Almost winning doesn't count anymore … a good thing for a country that fancies itself a sporting nation.

Five fifth-place finishes at the 2010 Games warrant re-examination.

Melissa Hollingsworth ended up fifth in skeleton over the course of four heats — a mere half-second from the gold medal total of Amy Williams of Great Britain. It was a miniscule margin of defeat that left Hollingsworth distraught, declaring, "I let my entire country down."

But Hollingsworth soldiered on, and instead of quitting she committed herself to the journey to Sochi in 2014. In eight World Cup races this season she's been on the podium three times and is ranked third in the world.

"It stinks," Patrick Chan said after finishing fifth in figure skating. But then again he learned something.

"I saw that one day I could dominate my sport."

Now, Chan is the Grand Prix champion, has the quad jump in his arsenal and has the inside track on next month's world championship in Tokyo.

On the last day of the Games in the biggest cross-country ski race, the 50-kilometre marathon, Sudbury's Devon Kershaw was fifth, 1.6 seconds from gold. He got lost in the dust of the Sidney Crosby goal and the men's hockey victory.

"That opportunity is gone forever," Kershaw said of that ordeal. "But it was the most motivating thing that could ever happen to me." This season in the massive Tour de Ski, Kershaw scored his first World Cup victory and found the podium four times in eight races.

Finally, there's alpine skier Erik Guay.

Fifth in both the downhill and Super G at Whistler, Guay missed two gold medals by the sum total of eight-tenths of a seconds — or the blink of an eye.

He wasn't the hottest interview afterwards. But he did collect himself to score three podium results and win the Crystal Globe to end the campaign. He's also the only Canadian to win a medal on this year's World Cup circuit.

That's the legacy of Vancouver, plain and simple. Nowadays for Canadian athletes this business of finishing fifth equals one thing.

Unfinished business.

Change is in the air

As start of spring training dawns, Jays get set to embark on new era

There is a sense of renewal that is inherent to spring training, and that feeling will be particularly strong for the Toronto Blue Jays when pitchers and catchers hold their first official workout Monday.

While general manager Alex Anthopoulos didn't radically overhaul the roster, several significant changes were made in the off-season. The clubhouse will be a very different place minus departed veterans Vernon Wells, Shaun Marcum and Scott Downs.

Add in that John Farrell is taking over as manager from the retired Cito Gaston after 2½ years of stewardship from the franchise giant, and change will definitely be in the air in Dunedin, Fla.

Big questions

Who fills out the back end of the rotation? How does the bullpen lineup? Can Adam Lind handle first base? Can the Blue Jays find a third baseman so Jose Bautista can remain in right field? How does the batting order shake out? Is catching prospect J.P. Arencibia ready?

With plenty of significant questions to answer, and many moving parts, much will be on the line at a camp with more intrigue than others in recent memory.

"There's no doubt," Farrell said in an interview this week. "We need, when we meet for the first time as a full squad on the 18th, to outline expectations not only for spring training, but going forward.

"I think it's important for us to set the tone right from Day 1 on what the expectations are on how we're prepared, and how we're going to eventually compete."

Given a work ethic that rivals that of his GM, Farrell can be counted on to hit the ground running. The 48-year-old from Monmouth Beach, N.J., was hired in October and has since spent countless hours talking to his players, coaches and front office staff to try to get a handle on the team.

That's given Farrell a sense of the people around him, but much like a couple that moves in together after a long time dating, there's still a period of adjustment once lives become fully intertwined.

Everyone in the Blue Jays clubhouse will need some time to figure out one another and understand the new realities around them.

"That's totally expected coming into this," said Farrell. "Any time you come into a new setting, there's going to be a relatively steep learning curve, whether it's with the coaches you've assembled or the players that are on that roster and vice versa."

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 You must figure out a money or business problem of some sort today. Don't let anyone talk you into accepting less than you are entitled to.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You have all the energy you need but that is not an excuse, still less an invitation, to take too many risks. If you try too hard, your efforts to impress someone in a position of power could backfire.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 An unspoken fear has been gnawing away at you for ages and it's about time that you dealt with it once and for all. If you face up to it today, it will most likely turn out to be nothing at all. Be brave. Be bold.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 You must let rivals know that you are not the sort of person who cracks under pressure. Today's cosmic set-up will give you zero tolerance when it comes to bossy people.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 Forget about trying to impress employers and other authority figures with boasts about all the great things you are going to do in the future and do something right now.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 You want nothing more than to be left alone at the moment and if other people know what's good for them, they will give you plenty of time and space. If they don't know what's good for them, they'll soon learn!

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Why are you so obsessive about something, or someone, that has nothing to do with you? Whatever the reason, you need to break the habit today because it is taking too much of your emotional energy.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 A relationship has reached a turning point and either today or over the weekend you will have to decide whether to take it in a new direction or end it.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Focus on the big picture and let other people take care of the little things, even though you could handle them yourself. Time is precious, and your time is better spent on strategic planning.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Sometimes, you are too cautious. Today, you will go to the other extreme and do something that is a bit radical. Imagine what the consequences might be. Then do it anyway.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 If you don't come to grips with a situation soon it will take on a life of its own and get beyond your control. You've got to forget about the past and create a new future for yourself.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Something will happen today that will make you angry with people in positions of power. Yes, they are taking liberties, and yes, they need to be made aware that it's not right.
